Q: What s the difference between spring water, mineral water and artesian water? A: According to Hank Rubin in The Kitchen Answer Book (Capital, 2002), artesian water is bottled from a well that has a water-bearing layer with a rock basis, mineral water has at least 200 parts per million of total dissolved solids without the addition of any minerals, and spring water is collected at the source of an underground water formation and has all the physical properties as when it came to the surface.

Q: Even though I rinse and drain them first, when I add frozen and thawed blueberries to batter, the juice from the berries discolors the mixture making my cake look unappetizing. Is there a way to prevent this? A: Sure. Just add the berries in their frozen state, says Hank Rubin in The Kitchen Answer Book.
